

Varsity Voices — cross-platform report

Aug 1 – 28, 2026
7 platforms, windows noted per section

Combined views / impressions 32.9K across all 7 platforms	Combined watch time ~242 hrs YouTube, Facebook, X video, podcast	Net new followers 145 YouTube, TikTok, X, podcast — sum	Est. revenue $9.58 YouTube only; all else $0
--	---	--	---

These four are rough roll-ups, not a like-for-like total — each platform measures over a different window (mostly Aug 1–27, but TikTok and Facebook are trailing 28 days, Instagram trailing 30, and podcast spans two overlapping windows). Treat them as an order-of-magnitude read, not a KPI.

Read: views are down sharply against the July baseline, but every other metric — watch time, subscribers, revenue — is up double digits. Fewer, longer views: the channel is converting better than it's growing in raw traffic.

Read: reach collapsed across the board, but Reels alone carry 81% of what's left, and three-quarters of viewers aren't followers yet — the page is still finding new eyes, it's just finding fewer of them than a month ago.

2	The MAIS Sleeper	229
3	Live clip, Jul 30	129

Read: views skew almost entirely non-follower (89%), but interactions flip the other way — followers do two-thirds of the engaging. Discovery and community are two different jobs here, and right now only one post (High School to Hinds) is doing both.

Read: everything is down 68–84% period-over-period, but the videos still winning are the longer-form coach/program breakdowns, not the branded episode clips — and 42% of views now come from Search, not the For You feed, which is unusually high and worth leaning into with searchable titles.

DAILY IMPRESSIONS

Peak Aug 27 (421) · trough Aug 10 (0)

Read: audience here is 100% recorded male and mostly 35–44. The branded episode posts pull the most impressions, but the single highest-engagement moments all month were plain "Welcome to our live show!" tweets (up to 19 engagements) — live-audio announcements are outperforming produced clips for interaction on this platform specifically.

TOP EPISODES BY IMPRESSIONS

2	MAIS Preview — 2A/1A, S2E00 Pt2	97
3	Top 10 MS HS Football Coaches	48
4	MHSAA Preview Pt2, S2E01	37

Read: the MAIS season preview (S2E00) is the clear engine of the month — it drove the two biggest impression days and the most consumption time (2.38 hrs) of anything published. Completion rate on it is only 33%, though, against 100% on the evergreen Top 10 Coaches episode — length or pacing may be costing finishes.

TAKEAWAYS

What this means for next month

- Almost everything organic is down. Facebook (–77%), TikTok (–70% views, –84% net followers) and Instagram all show real declines against their prior windows. YouTube and the podcast are the two channels moving the other way — worth asking whether that's a publishing-cadence shift or a real audience move.
- The audience skews male and 35–54 everywhere age is tracked (X: 100% recorded male, 36% aged 35–44; podcast: 77% male; TikTok: 77–87% male). If the content plan targets a broader demo, none of the current platforms are delivering it.
- Discovery and engagement are split across two audiences. Facebook and Instagram views are ~77–89% non-follower, but Instagram's actual interactions are two-thirds followers. New reach and community loyalty are being won by different content — worth naming which posts are doing which job.

- The MAIS season preview episode is the strongest single piece of content this month — it tops the podcast on both impressions and consumption time, and preview/recap content also leads on Facebook and X. Recap and preview formats are outperforming one-off player features across platforms.
- Live-show announcements outperform produced clips on X specifically for engagement, even though they're the least-produced posts on that platform. Simple, timely posts may be doing more there than the branded episode cards.

Combined hero figures are simple sums across platforms with different measurement windows and definitions of "view" — read them as a rough scale check, not a unified metric. Compiled Aug 28, 2026.
